

Your INL Update — Week of March 29, 2010

This is Misty Benjamin with your INL Update.

Idaho National Laboratory Director John Grossenbacher was a featured guest on Idaho Public Television's "Dialogue". On the program, he shared his vision of INL, nuclear energy and the lab's contribution to Idaho. You'll find a link to the interview at INL.gov.

INL cybersecurity researcher Bryan Hatton saw potential in young men digging through trash and scouting local thrift stores for parts to build computers. So he recruited them as interns and encouraged them to compete in the national Digital Forensics Challenge. Find out how INL's summer interns fared in the competition on the feature section of INL's Web site.

You are invited to a rummage sale to benefit the Snake River Animal Shelter on Saturday, April 10, between 10:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. INL employees are volunteering to support the rummage sale that will be held at the 4-H Fairground Exhibit Building on Rollandet in Idaho Falls.

This was your INL Update. You'll find more information at INL.gov, including community announcements and the latest INL News.
